Bison from the Bison Range are wild animals. As with all federal and state agencies managing wildlife; the CSKT makes no certification as to the suitability for human consumption. Meat inspection is responsibility of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and can be arranged independently through cooperating slaughter establishments.

The Bison Range is following a herd-health monitoring program for bison. This program is designed to assess the presence and prevalence of diseases in the population as a whole, and not to determine presence or absence of disease in individual animals. This program is part of an adaptive management process and emphasis varies according to current and local wildlife threats and/or needs for early detection and rapid response of wildlife diseases. Some agents of diseases such as Malignant Catarrhal Fever (MCF), Johne's disease (M. paratuberculosis), and Bovine Viral Diarrhea (BVD), have been detected at very low levels in the past.

Opportune testing in 2025 found the bison Range bison may have Microplasma bovis, further testing found in archive samples shows infection at least as far back as 2004, or further, in an effort to see prevalence of the disease in the herd CSKT will be testing as many herd members as possible to calculate next steps in management.

The Bison Range bison come from outside the designated Brucellosis Surveillance Area in Montana.

The CSKT Bison Range provides an on-site veterinarian during the Handling Event to conduct veterinary inspections and other necessary testing. The Bison Range will permit brucellosis and tuberculosis testing of bison leaving the range to meet animal health requirements of a recipient state. This must be arranged by the buyer with our on-site veterinarian. The Bison Range will provide holding facilities, feed and water for the 5 days required for tuberculosis testing and for shipping arrangements to be made. Costs incurred for these tests, a certificate of veterinary inspection, and any additional testing required by receiving states, are the responsibility of the buyer. Successful bidders are responsible for determining the testing requirements for their state and coordinating such testing with the Bison Range (406) 644-2211, or CSKT Biologist Shannon Clairmont(406)-675-2700 ext.7012 by September 22, 2026.

Selection of animals for this sale is predetermined by the CSKT Bison Range Biologist prior to the handling event. Sale animals are identified and herded into sale pens during our annual bison capture operation. This will occur on September 28th to October 1st between 8:30 and 5:30 pm and is not open to public viewing in 2026. Reasonable effort will be made to deliver normal and apparently healthy animals.

All animals will be delivered to buyer's trucks between the dates of October 5th-8th, 2026. Exact date and time for pick up is scheduled by the refuge biologist and buyer and can vary according to number purchased by buyer and timelines for required health tests. Out of state buyers schedule will be dependent on recipient state regulations and should be planned for in advance. A scheduled time for pick up will need to be arranged the week prior to the Capture Event and shipping will be conducted the week following the Handling Event.

TURN OVER

An appropriate “Bill of Sale” will be given to each buyer. Bison are sold, AS IS, NO WARRANTY, further, this is a contract for sale, any contractual disputes will be resolved in the CSKT forums.

Hauling equipment must be sturdy, well ventilated and covered with solid paneling over any holes/open areas to prevent bison from seeing outside the trailer; bison settle down faster when outside visual stimuli are eliminated. It is recommended that buyers plan on hauling any bulls separately from females. Light pickup stock-racks or small trailers are not sturdy enough for any animal over a yearling and will not be loaded. Any failure to load an animal due to equipment failure, or inadequate equipment, will result in the delivery of the bison being rescheduled to a later date to ensure adequate equipment is sourced. Cost incurred due to any delayed delivery of bison, for any reason, are the responsibility of the buyer.

All trucks and trailers must be thoroughly cleaned prior to entry into the Bison Range. Buyers must check in at the Visitor Center upon arrival. Equipment will be inspected and sprayed with a disinfectant before being directed to the loading station. Vehicles/trailers with unclean beds will not be loaded and directed to the nearest wash station (Charlo, St. Ignatius, or Ronan.)

CSKT Bison Range will not allow onsite slaughtering, this is done at buyers own residence, or at the buyers arranged slaughter facility.
